Grigor Mantashyan awarded SPIE Optics and Photonics Education Scholarship

BELLINGHAM, Washington, USA – 10 June 2022 – Grigor Mantashyan has been awarded a 2022 Optics and Photonics Education Scholarship by SPIE, the international society for optics and photonics, for his potential contributions to the field of optics, photonics or related field.

Mantashyan is currently pursuing his master's degree in the Department of General Physics at the Russian-Armenian University (Armenia). His thesis research involves the investigation of properties of semiconductor quantum dots with non-trivial geometries, and quantum dots as platforms for quantum information and quantum devices. He is currently interested in control of quantum dot systems using variety of optical, electrostatic and magnetic methods and quantum decoherence sources

Grigor Mantashyan (scientific supervisor David Hayrapetyan), who is currently pursuing his master's degree in the Department of General Physics and Quantum Nanostructures, #RAU, has been awarded a 2022 Optics and Photonics Education Scholarship by #SPIE, the international society for optics and photonics, for his potential contribution to the field of optics, photonics or related field...
